lew of our nations.

In adding oulty of our people, a hollow and ingenuity of our people, a hollow in a struggle as they may, our farmers cannot essape the conditions which fix the price of that produce, and so accordingly the rates which prevail in foreign markets flooded with the competition of countries enjoying a freer exchange of trade than we. The plausible presentation of the bluesings of a home market should not decaye our oppressed and impovershed agriculturists. There is no market for them that does not take its instructions from the scabord, and the seal board transmits the word of the foreign markets. Hecause my conviction that there should be a modification of our tariff laws, arose principle of a modification of our tariff laws, arose principle of a modification of our tariff laws, arose principle of consumers, comprising our farmer ers, our artisans and workingment and because did their condition has led me to protest against the present imposition, I am especially glad to see these sections of my fellow countryment arousing themselves to the importance of tariff reform. viction of the free trade American party gave favorable promise of its ultimate triump at the polls. On looking over the world the prospects for free trade certainly were not encouraging. This state of opinion had emboldened the champions of protection, long lurking in their holes, to venture out and renew the struggle under the name of fair trade.

Regarding bi-metalism, Gladstone said it was a movement in the direction of protection. Since the adoption of free trade the wages of workingmen have increased cib as in the tent of the desert chief in the wages of workingmen have increased to per cent. England was working out a great social and economical problem for the benefit of the world. He was confident that free trade, though temporarily districted, was distinct to become the universal charter of trade and obtain general accordance with diviligad patients. he has been accustomed to transmitting all his iil-gotten wealth to England, and that the whole of his large fortune is in the safe keeping of the Bank of England. It is extremely doubtful, however, if he will ever be able to derive any personal benefit from the result of his foresight in money matters, for he arrived here heavily chained on board an Italian man-of-war and now on board an Italian man-of-war and now lies in one of the terrible circular cells of the great San Stefano prison, where he is to spend the remainder of his life in solitary confinement. There are many who treely wager that within a few years he will find some means or other to recover his liberty and return. They base their opinions on the matter in the wenderful manner in which he has always, until now, been able to wriggle out of difficulties, even of a more serious nature than those in which he now finds himself.

Horn about 43 years ago at Alexandria, the son of a wealthy Egyptian land-owner and merchant, and nurtured in all the vice of that most wicked of Levantine cities, he first attracted public attention in '73, when he was accused of having poisoned a rich uncle with the assistance of the latter's wife, whom he subsequently married, and wife, whom he subsequently married, and of having, after a few months of wedded life, put his fair confederate to death also. The evidence against him was overwhelm-ing and he was condenned to death. A Ing and he was condemned to death. A judicious use of backsheesh among the authorities led to his sentence being commuted to banishment to Fosanghli, on the frontiers of the Soudan. Two years later Nubar Pasha, with whom he had been on terms of intimacy, became prime minister and was impelled to interest himself in the young poisoner's behalf. Nubar pointed out to Khedive Ismail that Moussa was far too clever a villian to be permitted to waste siever a villian to be permitted to waste its energies and talents at Fosanghli, and his energies and talents at Fosanghil, and that he might be far more profitably employed at Calro or Alexandria. Khedive ismall could naturally afford to regard with indulgence the offense of young Moussa. The latter was, therefore, quietly pardoned and recalled to the north where he was at once employed by both Nubar and Khedive on missions of a nature most likely to be entrusted to a man of Moussa's record. So great was the satisfaction which he gave his masters that by '70, when Nubar was dismissed and Ismail deposed. Moussa had risen to the rank of a bey of the first class. During the years which followed he continued in the service of Khedive Tewrik, but at the same time drew pay from the deposed ruler Ismail at Paris, and also from the petender Prince Hallin at Constantinople, for advancing their interests against the pretenter remaining their interests against those of Tewfik's government. He like-wise plotted with Arabi Pssha while continuing on the most friendly terms with all the European element in Egypt. He played his cards so cleverly that on the bombar ment of Alexandria in '82 he was regarded by foreign consuls and merchants as the principal native personage on whom they could rely and to whom they could confide both their property and the safety of their

both their property and the safety of their lives, while on the other hand Arabi and his followers were convinced that Moussa was devoted heart and soul to their cause. The later supposition proved correct, for it was he who incited and directed the massacre of the Europeans which marked Arabi's rebellion. It was he who led the mob of fanatics that looted Alexandria. After the capture of Alexandria andria. After the capture of Alexandria and the restoration of order in Egypt, he fled into the Lybian descret, intending to make his way to Tripoli, but being pursued he boarded a fishing boat and went to Crete, where he was handed over to the British authorities. He was tried with his friend and confederate Soliman Pasha, and both were sentenced to death. But when the day set for the execution were sentenced to death. But when the day set for the execution arrived only Soliman appeared on the scaffold. It was then learned that Moussa had obtained a commutation of his sentence to banishment at Massowah in consideration of his having turned state's evidence and betrayed the names of all the other leading native persons who had taken part in the insurrection. When the Italians stationed themselves at Massowah in 1885, he at once became a man of great importance. The Italians awarded to him the contract for supplies for their troops; entrusted to them all ne-

man of great importance. The Italians awarded to him the contract for supplies for their troops; entrusted to them all negotiations with friendly tribes, and they even went so far as to appoint him judge of the local supreme court. At the time of the Nongali massacre, when a regiment of Italian troops fell into amoush and were slaughtered to the last man by the Abyssinians, he opened with a contribution of $500 a public subscription for the erection of a memorial to the victims, although it has been demonstrated since that it was he who furnished the Abyssinians with the information that enabled them to surprise the unfortunate Italians. A short time after this he visited Europe. While at Rome he was entertained at dinner both by the King and Prime Minister Signor Crispi and was also invested with the cross of the Royal Order of St. Mark and St. Lazarus, Just after his return to Massowah the Italians arranged to march to 'Adoah, and to effect a meeting there with the Emperor-Meniek. On the arrival at Massowah General Orera found that Moussa was a prisoner heavily On the arrival at Massowah General Green found that Moussa was a prisoner heavily shackled on board the man-of-war Gari-baldi. It appeared that a couple of days after the departure of the general to meet Menelek, an Arab had been arrested by Italian gens d'armes for some petty offense. Finding that the man cast anxious glances at an amulet on his arm, the suspicion of the gens d'armes was aroused and they attempted to take it from him. In despair the Arab thrust it into his mouth and tried to swallow it, but was prevented and the amulet secured by the Italians. Itcontained a letter addressed by Moussa to the hostile Abyssinian chiefs informing them of the best time and place to surprise the Italian army on sits march, and also stating that all arrangements had been made by him with the Emir Kantibbe, chief of the tribe of Habbab Arabs for the sur-prise and capture of Massowah. The two onslaughs were to have taken place at the ne hour. Moussa's letter likewis alluded to the fact that the Dervishes were to avail themselves of the occasion to capture the city of Keren from the Italians. Both Moussa Bey and Emir Kantibbe were tried by court martial and sentenced to be hanged. King Humbert was, however, prevalled upon to commute their sentences to imprisonment for life. Moussa has, therefore, for the third time escaped execution of the death penalty pronounced upon him.

England and Germany are Struggling for Supremacy

IN THE GREAT DARK CONTINENT.

The Matter Before the Reichstag-Why Emin Left the British Service-Stanley on England's Apathy.

Special to THE HERALD-Examiner Dispatch.] LONDON, May 12 .- By cable to the N. Y. orld.]-English interests in central Africa had a serious setback in the recapture of the kingdom of Uganda from King Mwanga by King Kalema. In April news was received that the British East Africa company had concluded treaties with the christianized monarch Mwanga and chiefs, and had placed the King and country and all Uganda territory and posessions under the control of the British ompany. This virtual annexation of Uganda was done with the intention of clocking the way to the advancement of the Germans northward of Victoria nyanza, and preventing them from attempting to place Emin Pasha in the old province. The Germans were chagrined at the English getting ahead, for at the time when the treaty of Uganda was made the German party under Borchert had built a fortified station in the neighborhood of Mount Kenja, while Dr. Peters as often wester.

contrary, it is understood that some of them will advance the present $8 rate to $9.50, both to Council Bluffs and Kansas City in order to save themselves on local traffic. The Alton says their rates are purely a war measure, intended to, force an issue on the present demoralized condition of affairs.

The St. Paul road to-day made a sweeping reduction in passenger rates between East Africa in the Reichstur.

Bennix, May 12.-During the debate on the East Africa credits in the reichstag today, Baron von Marschall explained that the mission of Emin Pasha in Africa on the part of the Germans would be confined to establishing friendly relations with those tribes in the interior within the German sphere of interest and to estimating cost of eventually forming fortified stations in the interior. On the negotiations with England regarding the boundaries there of England regarding the boundaries there of their respective possessions in Africa, the predominating wish of Germany was to go hand in hand with England and cultivate a common interest for both countries.

In the course of the debate on the estimates for expenses of the colonies, Chancellor von Caprivi stated that though be originally approve the colonial policy of the empire, he agreed with Bismarck that such a policy could only be maintained without the support of the nation. As matters now stand, the government cannot retreat from its position regarding colonial affairs withits position regarding colonial affairs with-out loss of honor and money. No change of his views on the system was to be in any way implied from his assumption of office. The government would everywhere respect foreign rights and protect German rights.

Why Emin Joined the Germans. Camo, May 12 .- Dr. Quechinette has eccived a letter from Emin Pasha dated Bagamoyo, March 31. Emin says: "When I left the hospital, I found myself etween the English and Germans. My lecision to return to the heart of Africa in the interest of the Germans was taken which I saw the English were endeavoring to derive advantage from the prestige of myname. With reference to Stanley and Tippo Tib. I have information in my possession which, if published, would create a great sensation. Stanley will be the first to stir up people against me."

Stanley is Wearled With England's Apathy. LONDON, May 13 .- Stanley, in an interview regarding the German movements in Africa, said he was wearled by England's apathy and pliancy. In regard to the operations by the Germans, he said if England continued hactive the Germans would secure a permanent influence in Africa. Following the advice given by himself, the Germans went to Africa in 1885 and his advice had been repeatedly sought and accepted by them since that time. The Emperor will back Major Wissmann and it will be impossible for him to fail to advice the suppossible for him to fail to advice the supposition of the su vance German interests.
